around the world,
Borneo's rainforests
are being cut and
degraded for timber,
palm oil, pulp, rubber
and minerals. The increase in these activities is being matched by a growth
in illegal wildlife trade,
as cleared forests
provide easy access to more remote areas.

Deforestation in Borneo has taken place on an industrial scale since the 1960s. Borneo, the third largest island in the world, divided between Indonesia, Malaysia and Brunei, was once covered by dense tropical and subtropical rainforests.. In the 1980s and 1990s, the forests of Borneo were leveled at a rate unprecedented in human history, burned,
